"At its present stage of development the Kenny method of treatment of infantile paralysis may be described as a cult principle in which are some elements that perhaps will become accepted parts of medical technology. The adherents of the cult connected with it have at times used conflict methods and publicity (as contrasted with the more usual 'Scientific Procedures') in their efforts to persuade the orthodox; and the cult leader has served both as pragmatist and prophet, toward whom many of the common sense public have behaved as if in the presence of a miracle."

655. Smirnow, Virgil. "Canned Lists" For the Handicapped. Manpower Review, August, 1945. 12:8:9-10.

"Job lists have been defended as giving at least some clue to employment for disabled persons. However, the DICTIONARY OF OCCUPATIONAL TITLES, is the most comprehensive listing of jobs in existence, and will be the only really complete "list of jobs which persons with 'x' disability can do." The key to effective placement of the handicapped is individual consideration. No gadget, no cure-all, no panacea, no short-cut can take the place of diligent analysis of persons and jobs, and individualized selection."
